Should You Wear Your Glasses For Sports?

By Charles F. Metzler, Jr., O.D.

lDo you wear glasses? Do you wear your glasses when you play sports? More importantly, should you wear your glasses when you play sports. To answer these questions, a controlled study was conducted in which a number of typical tennis players were tested. Each averaged 5.2 years of experience and was evaluated by an experienced tennis pro. Then by using special lenses to blur their vision, an attempt was made to establish when wearing glasses became necessary.

The results of this study were not as conclusinve as one would expect. First, it was shown that proper glasses (either prescription or sunglasses) do not noticeably affect performance. The physical presence of an eyeglass frame did not distract the players and the pro was not able to discern poorer performance when the players were wearing a frame. (It should be noted, however, that the eyeglass frame used in the study was chosen specifically for playing sports and was properly fitted to each of the participants.)

Second, it was proven that blurred vision can affect a player's performance. The lenses used in the study reduced the visual acuity to slightly worse than 20/50. This is approximately the minimum visual level at which a driver's license is issued.

Based on the results of the study, I would advise the following:

1) Don't hesitate to wear glasses if you need them to see clearly, screen out glare, or for physical protection. The frame itself, if properly designed, will not adversely affect your playing.

2) If your distance vision is less than 20/20 but at least 20/50 without glasses and you are comfortable and playing well without them, wearing glasses will probably not significantly improve your game.

3) Contact lenses may be the best answer for those who desire clar vision and are bothered by wearing an eyeglass frame. Emphasis should be placed on getting a proper fit to protect lens slippage with quick eye movements.
